A higher form of fishing

ARGENTINA - CHILE - THE BAHAMAS

A Higher Form of Fishing

Nervous Waters is the leader in international Fly Fishing luxury destinations, with a collection of 9 lodges spread out across Argentina, Chile, and the Bahamas. We offer a plethora of coveted gamefish including bones and tarpon, sea-run and resident brown trout, rainbow trout, and golden dorado, pacú, and pirá pitá. Built around the best resource destinations, our lodges offer a level of service on par with the finest boutique hotels of the world, yet each shines with its own personality. The quality of our lodges is only surpassed by the dedication and expertise of our management and guiding teams who have spent decades mastering their craft, and their waters. Constantly on a quest to do even better, there is truly no family of angling destinations that compares.

OUR MISSION

Provide the committed angler a unique and unmatched experience in hospitality and in sport on the best fisheries. Take full part in the local community while employing sustainable conservation both at the lodges and on the water with an eye toward our children, and future generations.

OUR ORIGINS

We started our first lodge as something of a family holiday hobby; building a small 6-angler lodge in Río Grande, Tierra del Fuego. I was one of the guides, we rented tiny cars to fish from, and I brought Doug Larsen as the foreign expert to help us. We had a total of 12 fishermen the entire first season, and 18 the second. At that time, the Río Grande was thought to have the biggest sea-run-brown-trout on earth, a fact that was confirmed that first season, but more frequently in each season that followed as we were able to pass a groundbreaking catch and release law. It took us ten years to do it, but the Río Grande remains now as the only river in South America run with strict policies, and the fishing has benefited ever since it began.

The view I had back then was to spend a busy summer with our family and friends and save some bucks to buy my first used car. I loved being around fishing and fishermen, but at the time it wasn't a priority; making our guests happy was. I always say that if I had to choose a job in another life I would have liked to have been a butler in a big estate, like those featured in "Downton Abbey" or the movie, "The Remains of the Day;" so maybe those "butler genes" helped align my passions for service and sport.

We claim to be the first ever lodge owners to have catered for ladies, and we saw that it was important before many others did. At first we did it because making women comfortable with the amenities they would find at a 5 star hotel, would allow their husbands to come back year after year. Then the ladies started fishing, and more couples kept coming, and looking back I think that was our magic recipe. We have achieved the highest repeat client percentage in the industry and we generate excellent word of mouth. Simply our great clients tell their friends about us, and then their friends come to visit us as well. Word of mouth is still our biggest marketing action today.

Another good decision we made along the way was to follow our customers to their future trips — asking them where they were going next. That is how we began with bonefish, trout, bird hunting and stags. We then opened lodges in the very best locations for the particular species. We also took some chances — we opened the first lodge for freshwater Golden Dorado before anyone knew anything about this great game fish.

The aim is not to have a huge collection of properties, but to have the best collection one. If a location does not provide what it was expected, we simply close it, but thus far we have only closed two ventures in the last four decades, so our success ratio is pretty high. We open lodges or buy existing ones if it makes sense for our current customers, and our company's aim is to worship and take care of our clients as they are our most important asset.

The team theme is a huge part of who we are, we have great partners in most ventures and a team of highly trained experts at each lodge and our central office in Buenos Aires, but the idea is the same as it was in 1984. The vision then was to have fun doing what we loved in and near the outdoors, and more than 35 years later, that has not changed at all.

1. KAU TAPEN LODGE

WHERE IT ALL STARTED

Kau Tapen was the first fishing lodge on the Río Grande, opening its doors in the year 1984. Its name means “House of Fishing” in the Ona Language and here, in the heart of the Río Grande watershed, live the best pools on the river. If the walls of this magnificent lodge could talk, they would tell story after story of battles with huge trout over thirty-plus years. Kau Tapen Lodge embodies the fly fishing experience and to hundreds of anglers, it is their fishing home. On the river, short walks and shallow wading are the norm. Single or two-handed rods are both effective. Skate a bomber over a resting lie, or drift a nymph next to a cut-bank for Sea-Run Trout you’ve only seen in your dreams.

Kau Tapen is located on the heart of the Rio Grande, the most productive sea-run brown trout fishery in the world, and the easiest river you'll ever wade, with a gravel bottom and even flow.

2. VILLA MARÍA LODGE

IF YOU ARE TOUGH ENOUGH

Villa María is the second of the De Las Carreras family lodges to open on the Río Grande after Kau Tapen, and has offered small private groups exciting fishing on some of the most productive pools in the lower river since 1994. Unlike Kau Tapen, which is located on the middle river, Villa María offers anglers first crack at newly arrived Sea Trout on the lower Río Grande. For fishermen who enjoy the challenges and rewards of two-handed rods, this is a dream come true! With friendly and dedicated house staff and guides, Villa María is very well suited to caring for small groups of friends and family.

3. PIRÁ LODGE

IN THE SEARCH OF GOLD

Esteros del Iberá Reserve (from the Guaraní language, meaning “Bright Waters”) is one of South America’s most important freshwater reservoirs. Ranked as the second-largest wetland in the world after the Pantanal in Brazil, it’s also enormous. The area encompasses more than 3 million acres of flowing water – gin-clear creeks, shallows, lakes, swamps, and lagoons. Pirá Lodge, in northern Argentina’s Corrientes Province, strategically places anglers at the southern tip of the expansive wetland; a habitat-rich bottleneck where the marsh and Corriente River ecosystems converge. Here, the Dorado is king.

Season: October to May

The region houses one of the most productive sections on the Upper Paraná River, a clear-water fishery that consistently kicks out good numbers of large Dorado. Its secret lies in its structure: generally fast-flowing runs, coursing over beautiful rock gardens. You'll also sight-fish sandbank zones, where, when the conditions are right, colossal Dorado hunt Sábalo baitfish that seasonally congregate in big schools.
